LEARN:

1. Now that you have taken time to learn the different ideas on vet clinic design, you will want to now start planning your own clinic layout. To do this, you will want to get familiar with the Clinic Layout Planning Form. Use a copy to start preparing your design ideas. Take time to record the necessary details that you will use.

This will become a great place to review as you start creating your design. You may want to use additional graph paper and pencils to create your final design options. Complete the Clinic Layout Planning Form before you move on. This may take some time, consideration, and research to make the right design for your animals' needs.
2. After you have completed the form, take the Animal Clinic Design Kit and start drawing/designing each room you want to create. Use the permanent fixtures to complete this design.

REVIEW:

1. After you have created your final clinic design, you should take a picture or video of your design. Explain the reasoning behind the build/design of the main features in writing or on video.
2. After you have done this, you should use an Animal Clinic Design Critique Form and look at the things you feel would really work well in this clinic as well as what issues (weakness) might be caused by this design.
3. Optional: You can move the design from the whiteboard to graph paper to have a permanent copy of your design.
