Best Practices-Calf Simulator

Tracy Heinbuch, Plymouth High School Ag Teacher

Tip: Display it front and center!

“Even with kids that we have in our homeroom, they’ll come in, and they’ll be like ‘Oh my gosh, what is that? Sometimes that encourages them to take an ag class, and if it doesn’t do that, you at least made them more knowledgeable about some aspects of agriculture.”

Tip: Use it to assess students’ skills

“They have to talk us through the steps... Sometimes our assessments are not paper-pencil. Walk us through what you’re doing and show us that you’re capable of doing that.”

Tip: Use the curriculum!

“There’s always pieces within any of the products’ curriculums that can be helpful. Those pictures, diagrams, and the PowerPoints are very helpful to put up on the screen, especially when you’re giving that background information.”
